Come learn more about your options and the history of swing dancing in this video by Belvedere Ballroom, featuring “The Slow Mo Guys.” The Chord Company brings it to San Francisco on Saturday. “Reaching the Limits” features “The Slow Mo Guys” and “The Ditto Girls.” On Sunday, “The Dittos” will present “My Final Dance.” Tickets for “Reaching the Limits” are now on sale. $5 reserved and $10 general admission. Other Chord Company events are planned for the following weekends in San Francisco: Saturday, April 6: “Dancing to the DJ” features “The Dittos” and “The Slow Mo Guys.”Q: Is there a better solution than storing login credentials in the clients browser? I'm working on a small application and I'm using a master password to authenticate the client. I want to avoid storing the users login credentials on the clients computer but I would like to avoid having to create a custom file which stores this information. At the moment, the best solution I can come up with is to store the master password on the website and access the master password file when the user attempts to login. Has anyone got any better ideas or any suggestions for how I can improve my current solution. I'm using ASP.NET, C# and Windows authentication. Thanks for your help. A: Storing the master password in a cookie in the browser is going to have the same issues as writing it to disk: Depending on the
