Warez List URL: Warez List: Note: . Calmodulin is a pleiotropic modulator of phosphorylase kinase activity. Treatment of a fraction of the phosphorylase kinase-containing particulate fraction of rat skeletal muscle with the protein phosphatase inhibitor okadaic acid, but not with another phosphatase inhibitor, calyculin A, resulted in a large increase in the basal activity of the enzyme. In the absence of okadaic acid, calmodulin had no effect. However, prior treatment with calmodulin plus okadaic acid resulted in an increase in activity not only of the particulate fraction of the enzyme but of isolated phosphorylase kinase (approximately 20-fold). The activation of phosphorylase kinase by calmodulin plus okadaic acid treatment of the particulate fraction was accompanied by a decrease in the level of phosphorylation of the enzyme. In isolated skeletal muscle, calmodulin plus okadaic acid treatment resulted in an increase in activity of skeletal muscle phosphorylase kinase, and the increases could be attributed to calmodulin activation of the enzyme in the ba244e880a
